Remember the game “telephone”? It’s one of my favorite “old-school” camp games and too often communication from camp mimics the game of telephone and becomes jumbled. My favorite example is when we start the chain by posting camp pictures on our photo gallery. As “telephone messages” are passed down the chain, what started as simply a glimpse into a fun evening program turns into a two-hour analysis of facial expressions and hand gestures. Our intent of briefly connecting parents to the experience their child is having at camp can backfire, becoming “evidence” that creates concerns.

That’s why it’s important to share as much information as possible so you can stay connected with what’s happening at camp in a comprehensive way. This year we have put together a plan for you that explains all the ways we will communicate with the entire camp community. No longer do campers have to wait until June to find out exciting news about camp. No longer do parents need to numb their fingers hitting the refresh button on their computer waiting for new photos to be posted. No longer do alumni need to feel disengaged from CW. No longer do counselors need to hold in their excitement for camp to get them excited about the summer. Then, at the end of their first week, the village supervisor calls the parents to give them an update on their child’s experience.

Letter-Writing Day (and Parent Letter-Writing Day)
Campers write letters every Monday and Thursday so our parents receive two letters each week from their child. For parents, we know that emailing is quick and easy, but because campers love to get letters too, this year we are introducing Parent Letter-Writing Day on Wednesday. We hope every Wednesday all parents will write a letter to their child at camp.

Newsletters
Yep, you’re reading one right now. Each fall and spring you’ll get a newsletter in the mail with a ton of fun information about camp that highlights campers, staff, alumni, new activities and year-round programs. Take a look inside!

This assortment of communication tools should make it easier for you to stay in touch with camp and your camper and consistently get a full picture of the camp experience. Not everyone is well-versed in the art of social media, and even we are still learning the ropes, but we know your child or grandchild can navigate these sites with ease and set up an account for you in minutes.

We look forward to sharing the camp experience with you throughout the entire year. See you around the campfire!

Stand Up Paddleboards (SUP)
We have canoes, kayaks, a trampoline, chicken boards, the iceberg, tubing, waterskiing, and wake boarding. The lake is filled with fun toys and new challenges, but why not one more toy? We asked around and did some research and it was obvious, people want Stand Up Paddleboards (SUP) down at the lake. A cross between a surf board and chicken board, the SUP gives you the space to stand up and paddle around without having to worry about balance. Not only are they fun, but they are a great work out helping to shape your core and upper body. Anybody wanting to stay in shape for school sports, cheerleading, or just enjoyment of working out will appreciate the added benefit. Tour our waterfront in style this summer with our SUPs!

Plus, it’s just gonna be a good ‘ole time.

Specialist-in-Residence (S.I.R) Program
You may no longer be a camper or a staff member, but there are ways to stay connected to camp. For some it might be sending your child to camp or volunteering your time with our committee - nobody’s camp career has to have an expiration date. For Adam Goldberg, it’s sharing his love of art. Adam graduated from Bowling Green State University in 2011 with a Masters of Fine Arts. His focus was 3-Dimensional studies in glass & sculpture. This summer Adam will spend time at our art shack as a specialist-in-residence teaching our campers about glass and helping them create special projects to bring home and share with their family. To learn more about Adam visit his website at gatheredartgallery.com or stop by his art gallery in Toledo located at 23 N. Huron.

Do you still daydream about camp and feel that your professional skills or personal passion could add to the camp cultural? Here are ways others have stayed connected:

- Used their expertise to facilitate staff training sessions.
- Invited our campers to participate in community service projects within their organizations.
- Volunteered their time as doctors and nurses.
- Developed and led unique camper programs during the summer.
- The possibilities are endless! Contact the camp office and let us know how you want to contribute this summer.

Alumni Event
We’ve had some fun and exciting programs this year. Our camper reunions are always a hit, our staff reunions got us pumped for the summer, and our winter programs reminded us how awesome camp will be in a few short months. But what about our alumni? After many conversations and a ton of planning we have scheduled our Alumni Reunion! You’ll have the chance to reminisce about the “glory days,” reconnect with camp friends, and have an opportunity to learn about what’s happening at camp and how you can still be involved.

Andy’s first two weeks at Camp Wise as a young lad were full of questions. Who was this “Brown Eyed Girl” everyone sang about? How did people get in the loft during the Birkat Hamazon? What in the world was Maccabiah? What was a “Spice Wheel” and why should he ask his server for one? The list was endless. Fifteen years later, after being a camper, SIT, counselor, supervisor, and memorizing every song in the song book (even the M.T.A Song) he felt he had run out of questions to ask. Soon cartwheels turned to car wheels ‘round the town, then down the road, then out of town to find more questions to ask. Time went by as it always does and he moved to another town. In Portland he led Environmental Education programs for 6th grade students. In Denver he explored the city by bike and found joy substituting at local schools. In Arizona he taught History to high school students. In Wyoming he led groups through the mountains. In Hong Kong he found wilderness. But new questions began to arise…the kind that could only be answered in one place. When the opportunity arose to return to “The Home of Happiness” Andy hopped on board. Andy is so excited to be working at camp – winter, spring, summer, and fall…But especially SUMMER! He’s eager to get to know all the campers, staff, families and alumni that make Camp Wise rock! He can’t wait for meals in the Chadar, nights by the campfire, and to have the best sweet sixteenth summer ever!
“we are surrounded by insurmountable opportunity:”
A live wise conversation with Camp Wise Alumna
Marisha Auerbach

Creating appropriate growth through thoughtful design guides Camp Wise Alumnus Marisha Auerbach in her work and personal life. Marisha, who attended camp in the late ’80s and early ’90s, resides in Portland, Oregon where she is a certified Permaculturalist, teaching at three local universities, and works with various non-profits spreading the impact of permaculture locally, nationally and internationally.

Permaculture is a movement that stems from a set of ecological design principles surrounding three core ethics: taking care of the earth, taking care of people, and sharing the yield. In Hebrew and at CW we might call those principles Shomrei Adamah (Keepers of the Earth), Tzedakah (Justice), and Tikkun Olam (repairing the world). Permaculture is most visible in the farming and gardening world, however its proponents see its relevance far beyond the reaches of soil beds and grapevines. For many who practice, permaculture is a shift in culture from one of consumption and impermanence, to one of reuse and sustainability.

Growing up in Shaker Heights, Marisha found an exciting new world at Camp Wise. “Camp was a place to be outdoors,” she said. “I was in Shaker Heights in a postage stamp lot watching movies of kids who could run out and play in the woods,” and Marisha felt Camp Wise was a place that gave her an opportunity to have that same spontaneous access. For Marisha, Camp Wise helped plant a kernel for her future as an ecological designer. Yet it is no mistake that Marisha’s interest in the outdoors is so tightly tied to the human interaction with the ecosystem.

Despite having fun riding horses, walking in the woods, and participating in all the activities at Wise, what Marisha remembers most fondly when thinking back on her summers at camp are her friends. When she tries to picture Camp Wise, she sees a tight-framed shot of the smiling faces of the group of friends she built over the years.

Marisha got involved with and continued her love of permaculture when she moved West in the mid-’90s after camp. She chose to study at Evergreen State College in Olympia, WA because it offered her an opportunity to design a degree program based on those ideas she found important. Free from the confines of a major, distribution requirements, and the limiting components of a traditional university, Marisha felt as though she was finally able to come into her own and, “design [her] life in a way that was fulfilling to [herself] and others.”

Thoughtful growth through deliberate design might feel like a familiar theme to the Camp Wise community as it is reflected in the first sentence of our Mission Statement that reads, “Camp Wise provides a friendly, supportive, and cooperative atmosphere that fosters individual growth at each camper’s own pace.” An important tenant of permaculture design is considering humans as a part of the larger ecosystem. It’s no wonder that the building of community and the importance of individual growth at Camp Wise ties so nicely into a permaculture framework. In Marisha’s words, “The cycles of celebration in Judaism are tied to the cycles of the natural world,” and Camp Wise provides a space where kids are safe to access the natural world intertwined with a unique human environment and Jewish ecological traditions.

In addition to her work in Oregon, Marisha occasionally travels with groups like City Repair Project, who help communities to “reclaim urban spaces to create community-oriented places.” In fact, she was just in Cleveland earlier this April organizing a “place-making” event sponsored by the Cleveland Foundation. Marisha strives to use her South East Portland home as a model for how people can utilize the principles of permaculture on an average city lot. She has converted her lawn into growing space, her fence into grapevines, her roof into a garden, and her gutters into a rain-catchment system. “We are nature,” says Marisha. “We are a part of an ecosystem.” She knows that everyone has the potential to contribute, because we are “surrounded by insurmountable opportunity.”

To learn more about permaculture you can visit Marisha’s website at www.herbwisdom.com. For more on the City Repair Project, or to get involved in “place making” in Cleveland visit their website at cityrepair.org. calling all camp families!

There are many wonderful ways for our camp families to help us make our summer successful. One is by hosting some of our international staff on their day(s) off. This summer we have staff joining us from countries including Israel, Australia and the UK.

The other opportunity to volunteer is as a camp doctor. Our camp infirmary is staffed 24 hours-a-day with registered nurses. We are looking for doctors who can “take call” (by phone) for one week to speak with the camp nurses, and arrange to come to camp three times during their call week to see campers on site.

Please contact Cathy at the camp office to help us out! 216-593-6250

reunions: “we’re just two lost souls swimmin’ in a fish bowl”

A Camp Wiser knows that in an ideal world camp would last 8-11 months, and the rest of life would just squeeze into a month or two. We’ve heard these comments over and over again from our campers. We’ve pressured school principles and CEOs to crunch their portion of the year into a few short weeks so that camp can run year-round. Sadly, we lost the battle. Camp will remain a creature born in June, grown in July, and aging in August that hibernates the rest of the year. Fortunately for Camp Wisers near and far we have been able to pick a few days and nights to reunite and keep the Camp Wise ruach rockin’ all year long!

This winter we had two awesome city reunions. In November over 250 campers and staff bounced into Fun N’ Stuff for our annual Cleveland Camper Reunion. What a treat! Unphased by the large amounts of tryptophan consumed the day before at Thanksgiving dinner, the energy at the Reunion was reminiscent of the Chadar on the first day of camp! Lots of hugs, high fives, and catching up, but even more discussion of Summer 2013! We had tons of fun hanging out with all our Cleveland families and it was great to have a space for all the parents as they hung out in the “Kid Free Zone!” In February we met up with our Columbus families at KDB for our fourth annual Columbus Camper Reunion. Pizza, games, prizes, and laughter filled the afternoon for the few hours we were in Columbus! Having a chance to catch up with campers and parents reminds us of how amazing our camp community truly is!

Then there were the winter overnights. The third annual Ohalim Winter Wonderland came kickin’ in this January with over 80 participants! The overnight was unbelievable with the egg-flingin’ evening programs, newspaper “snow” ball fights, quick-shootin’ name that tune, and soup ‘n song sessions! Thanks Ohalim for an incredible Wonderland. A few weeks later, over 50 Noar campers showed up to our first annual A Mid-Winter’s Noar Dream—better known as “The Dream.” And what a dream it was! The evening kicked off with an epic, “Battle of the Sexes,” and flowed straight into our folk dance - “The Virginia Reel!” After some movie and hang-out time Noar went straight to bed. In the morning a hearty breakfast and a quick scavenger hunt preceded the Main Event…tubing at Brandywine Polar Blast! Noar had a great time forming some of the longest “tube chains” the resort had ever seen, and flinging themselves down the mountain. We love you Noar!

We’ve now entered the long, hard wait for summer. By the time this paper makes it to your home there will be less than three months until the beginning of camp. We can’t wait to see you then, but to help hold you over until camp, here is a list of ten ways you can have your own “personal reunion” in the meantime -

1. Keep checking our Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram pages to find out what’s going on at camp and how YOU can participate!

See you this summer!!! ✨

5. WEAR YOUR CAMP SHIRT ON WISE WEDNESDAYS and send a picture to asaltzman@mandeljcc.org.

4. After you brush your teeth in the morning yell, “Alright, alright, alright, okay, okay, okay…let’s go to breakfast!”

3. Change your sheets every Sunday and sing “New on top, top on bottom, bottom in the bag!”

2. Do the instrument movements during “Adon Olam” at your synagogue.

ways we’re living wisely

Tikkun Olam (Repairing the World) is one of Camp’s core values. We love sharing how members of our CW community have embraced this value. Read more on how some of our campers and staff members have been Living Wisely this year!

There are two things that Jessica Linden, Noar camper, loves - swimming and Camp Wise. So it was a no-brainer when she combined her love of both for her Bat Mitzvah project this winter and created Swim for Camp Wise. She wanted to provide opportunities for other campers to attend CW so they could have the same experiences she has had over the years. The money raised was donated to the Camp Wise scholarship fund, something that is dear to Jessica’s heart. Each swimmer was encouraged to get sponsorships for their participation and over $2000 was raised! Jessica was overwhelmed by the amount of support from the community and is thankful to everyone for their help. We appreciate Jessica’s commitment to helping more campers enjoy CW.

Joshua Levy, Ohalim camper, knows how important it is for every child to have a summer camp experience. This year he created a project called Flying Higher to benefit Flying Horse Farms, a place where children with serious illnesses can come to experience the magic of camp. Flying Horse Farms provides nearly 2,500 campers with a camp experience each year. This spring Joshua will be participating in their Flyathon Duathlon consisting of running and biking for kids ages 7-15. As a participant Joshua will be raising money for camperships (scholarships). We wish Joshua the best of luck!

Jonah Rubanenko believes camp is a place where children should feel safe. As a Noar camper with asthma and allergies he understands the important role our medical staff play and the camp’s need for a new infirmary. This May Jonah will be raising awareness and dollars for the new CW infirmary through his Bar Mitzvah project. Jonah will be donating a portion of his gifts and he hopes to raise at least double chai ($3600) for the new infirmary. The table centerpieces at the Bar Mitzvah celebration will be baskets of new infirmary supplies and there will be a gift table at the party where guests can bring items to donate. We are grateful for Jonah’s amazing support.

Counselor Rachel Miller has always wanted to volunteer her time through her love of drama and music. Through a program called Helping Hands, run by the Fox Hollies School for children with Special Needs at the University of Birmingham, she has found the perfect way to provide encouragement and guidance to children in the context of education. She is looking forward to becoming fluent in Makaton, a special sign language that was developed to help people with disabilities who struggle to communicate in spoken language. We are excited for Rachel to share her experiences with everyone at camp this summer.

Ohalim Boys Supervisor Andrew Mann, known better as Manndrew, participates in The Ohio State University’s annual BuckeyeThon. It is a dance marathon that helps raise money for Nationwide Children’s Hospital with the ultimate goal of ending childhood cancer. Andrew stated that one of the main reasons he participates in the BuckeyeThon is that he has the opportunity to contribute to a cause greater than himself. As a member of the steering committee, Andrew helped the BuckeyeThon become the largest Dance Marathon in history with over 3,600+ people participating and over $600K raised. What a mensch!

Rosanna Baskin, Counselor and 2013 Cornerstone Fellow, runs a fundraiser every semester called Kappa Kappa Grilled Cheese. The money raised helps to provide a free summer camp experience for all campers who attend Kappa Kidney Camp, a camp for children ages 8-18 on dialysis or who have had a kidney transplant. This is particularly important to Rosanna because after spending her summers at Wise, she knows how wonderful and vital camp is for a child’s self-esteem and growth. She likes knowing she is helping these children have the same opportunities as campers who attend CW. This fall, Rosanna’s sorority raised money in downtown Bowling Green where they sold grilled cheese sandwiches, tomato soup, (mmm – a favorite meal at CW) and Kappa Kool-Aid. Way to go Rosanna!

After a long 24 hours of dancing, Andrew hits the floor exhausted

C.W. cheer

When someone at camp celebrates a big day we all stand on our benches and cheer about it! Here is a big CW cheer for all those campers, who with their families have celebrated their B’nei Mitzvot since our last newsletter. Please let us know if we’ve missed you and we’ll include you in our next issue.
